

Words of Wisdom for the Class of 2011

Someone who thinks logically provides a nice contrast to the real world.

Not one shred of evidence supports the notion that life should be taken too seriously.

If you must choose between two evils, pick the one you've never tried before.

From the Cutting Room Floor The lost words of Key West

August 7th

The Freshman Class would like to warmly welcome our falling comrades back into the fold; Vince has magically made it back from a torn meniscus by leveraging the lack of cartilage in his knee with an abundance of muscle mass resulting in an increased ROA "Return On Accident" and Denise has recovered from an evident error in caffeine content by the "Barista" when fixing her foaming frappuccino. The court reporter, "Inka, the mystery blonde", whom Vince charged with capturing the pertinent power points in his absence, will no longer be needed. The Class has also been asked to adhere to the simple rules of the sand box. There appears to have been an indifference of opinion during the operation of office equipment in the Hilton's business center yesterday; and was not over ink quality. Apparently, Bud Light will not be the official sponsor of this year's (or any future year's) study sessions. More to come from Key West...

Good Times

As we returned to our normal lives, some of us looked back on the days in class and couldn't help but think...Where did the week go?

So, in case you've been missing your fellow classmates -and you know you have- here's a little something to keep them on your mind. At least for the next few seconds.

Most likely to ask a question he already knows the answer to...Tom

Most likely to welcome you to the "Gun Show"...Adam

The two most likely to appear on CMT's Can You Duet...Ivy and Jamie

Most Artistic (Hey, doodles are art)...Vince
